MJO Portal

MJO's top five priorities

1. Respond to feedback from the field in a timely manner
2. Clean up templates and make them user friendly
3. Integrate reports with MJO - make reports easy and useful
4. Help the field with bandwidth problems where possible
5. Continue to refine and integrate training

Status Reports

GCHCA and SPMCA Status Reports now allow the selection of specific data points. Please check them out and let us know.

DID YOU KNOW?

- MJO needs your help! We are seeing a lot of incomplete or incorrect scans for upload to HRC. Please ensure you upload a complete packet and that you upload all docs in the same session.

Home | About | Resources | Training Materials | A View From the Bench

The position of military judge was created in 1900 with the implementation of the Military Justice Act of 1900. Prior to that time, the legal advisor to court-martial panels (panels) also acted as a law officer, and the law officer did not have the authority and powers of today's military judges.

Military judges provide both general and special courts-martial and have many of the powers of federal judges including the authority to preside at judge alone trials when an accused elects that option. Military judges hold court-martial panels on the law and apply the Military Rules of Evidence, patterns closely after the Federal Rules of Evidence. Military judges, like federal judges, may have search and seizure authorities based on probable cause and revoke the necessity for continued pretrial confinement.

The Army Trial Judiciary currently consists of 27 active-duty military trial judges and 25 Active Reserve military trial judges, all full grade officers and members of the Judge Advocate General's Corps. All military judges are attorneys who have graduated from an accredited law school and are admitted to practice law in one or more states.

The Trial Judiciary is divided into five geographical circuits: the 1st Judicial Circuit in the Northeast and Middle Atlantic States; the 2nd Judicial Circuit in the Southeast; the 3rd Judicial Circuit in the Southwest and Midwest; the 4th Judicial Circuit in the Far West and Far East; and the 5th Judicial Circuit in Europe and Southeast Asia.

In addition to presiding at court-martial, the Army Trial Judiciary has other significant responsibilities to ensure the quality of the Army judiciary and the fairness of the military justice system to include:

- Supervising the Army's Military Magistrate Program. Chief Circuit judges appoint qualified judge advocates throughout the Army as part-time military magistrates empowering them, when appropriate, to fulfill the search and seizure and to review the necessity for continued pretrial confinement of soldiers pending court-martial.
- Administering an advocacy training program for first and defense counsel called "Bridging the Gap." The program includes an initial, gateway session for new counsel and cost-benefit refresher after each trial to improve the advocacy of counsel.
- Publishing and revising the Military Judges' Benchbook, JAG Benchbook (7-5) and the Electronic Benchbook. The publication contains the vast majority of panel instructions used by military judges in all five services.
- In conjunction with The Judge Advocate General's Legal Center and School at Charlottesville, Virginia, conduct the Military Judge Course. This is an intensive three-week annual training program for new military judges. The course, which began in 1900 with four students taught that first year, trains all military trial judges, active and reserve, for all five armed services, including the National Guard. The course includes classroom instruction, practical exercises, seminar discussions, a comprehensive examination, and a graduation and investiture ceremony. Upon successful completion, the respective service
